QUESTION 1

Read through the passage and then answer all the questions on the paper provided.

A second chance for Ivory the pangolin

1. In early December last year, law enforcement officers in South Africa received information that a pangolin was being offered for sale on the market for illegal wildlife trade. These scaly mammals—harmless to humans but critical to nature — are threatened by poachers and traders around the world. They are known as the guardians of the forest because they protect forests from termite and ant destruction, eating millions of insects annually. The pangolin is the world’s most trafficked and poached wild mammal, because of the demand for its meat and scales which is used in traditional medicine. As they are a protected species in South Africa, the officers planned and executed an operation in Ivory Park, a suburb of Johannesburg, to save the pangolin from the poachers.
2. Later that night, the pangolin was transported to the Johannesburg Wildlife Veterinary Hospital, where Nicci Wright is an expert wildlife rehabilitator. Here, Nicci and the team took “Ivory” the pangolin, named after the area where he was confiscated, into their care.

3. Poachers usually keep pangolins in captivity with no water or food for weeks, and they often die of dehydration. Thankfully, the initial examination of Ivory revealed no severe injuries or trauma, but he smelled strongly of bleach. It is thought that the suspected poachers had soaked him in a bucket of bleach in an attempt to disguise his natural smell to avoid detection from police sniffer dogs.

4. That evening, Ivory was taken to a safe place which had ant and termite mounds—staple foods of pangolins—who are specialist feeders. Ivory immediately started to feed on both, and enjoyed three- to four-hour foraging sessions every night after that. Once the team was satisfied that Ivory had stabilized and was able to look for ants and termites on his own, they arranged for his release in a carefully selected area. They attached a tracking device to a scale on his back to monitor his behaviour and movement and released him safely back into the wild. He has since established his own territory and is doing well.

5. On 19 January 2018, Ivory’s poachers appeared in court for sentencing. The prime suspect was sentenced to seven years in prison without the option of a fine. This sentence was welcomed as it sends a strong message to poachers.

6. World Pangolin Day is celebrated every year on the third Saturday in February. This year it was on 17 February 2018.
